From the Corner Room

October 2022

It is going to be an amazing year in FACS! Just look at what we have been doing so far. (Room door designed and completed by Haley Howe in PBL).

Into to Design: Students are working with the basic elements of design. Elements of design are used in all design whether we consciously think about how we are using them. We made logos using only lines, we made forms out of play clay, searched for online photos for space, took pictures in the hallways for shapes, and created texturized paper for the element of texture.

Project- Based- Learning

Seven students are working with a variety of projects. We are learning new skills along the way such as making a paper airplane out of poster board is hard, or making tile coasters requires a steady hand, or designing characters that I can see in my head and putting it on paper is a challenge. A few recipes have been attempted, some with success and others needed to be done more than once to get a good result. All projects need to be planned in advanced, students purchase any supplies not found in the FACS room, and a reflection following the project is completed.

7th grade FACS

We spent several weeks on digital safety and finding our way around some of the Google software we use in class. The 7th graders are eager to get into the kitchens. All 7th graders assured me they were excellent cooks so it will be an interesting foods unit. Appetizers and simple snack recipes will be used in the food labs. These are recipes students should be able to make at home with little or no supervision. Students are learning to use microwave recipes, stove-top, oven, and a broiler recipe.

Senior Skills

Seniors are currently practicing relationship skills. These skills are so important for now and into their future. Dating relationships are covered as well as family and peer relationships. Students have completed units on time management and college preparation in the month of September.

Textiles

Three students are finishing up with hand stitching techniques. Once they complete their pincushions, they will be able to find projects that they would like to sew for themselves or others. Textile students can also learn or practice skills such as crochet, embroidery by hand, or knitting. They can hardly wait until they can move on and “get sewing”.

Foods

Three kitchens are available for the three Foods students. In September they made salsa, fried green tomatoes, three different vegetables labs, and potato labs. The emphasis for those weeks was food that is available toward the end of the summer. Donations by staff contributed to the labs.

On September 3rd, 2022, The Lewiston FFA dairy evaluation team traveled to State Fair Park in Grand Island, Nebraska, to compete in the State FFA dairy cattle evaluation CDE. The team consisted of Leah Christen, Emma Dekoning, Ashlynn Anderson, Everett Bohling, Jaque Mullins, Delayne Currie, Megan Zoch, and Addison Jarred. This Event was made up of a written exam and in person judging with 24 different head of cattle being shown. Lewiston Consolidated placed 4th in the state, earning a blue ribbon. Individually, Leah Christen brought home the state silver medal and a purple ribbon for her 2nd place finish. Emma de Koning also earned a blue ribbon for her 10th place finish.

August 29th the Lewiston Band performed at the NE State Fair.

The Lewiston Cheerleaders Cheer for the first "home" football game vs. Wilcox-Hildreth

The "Under the Sea: Explore an Ocean of Books" fall book fair sales reached the $2000 goal. With the profits, each PreK-6th grade classroom received $60 in books, and the library received $150 in books. The elementary students enjoyed an "Ocean Party" since the goal was reached.

Kayleigh Jaramio, 1st grader, checks out one of the books purchased for the library with the book fair profits.

Backpack Connection Series

About this Series

The Backpack Connection Series was created by TACSEI to provide a way for teachers and parents/caregivers to work together to help young children develop social emotional skills and reduce challenging behavior. Teachers may choose to send a handout home in each child's backpack when a new strategy or skill is introduced to the class. Each Backpack Connection handout provides information that helps parents stay informed about what their child is learning at school and specific ideas on how to use the strategy or skill at home.

The Pyramid Model

The Pyramid Model is a framework that provides programs with guidance on how to promote social emotional competence in all children and design effective interventions that support young children who might have persistent challenging behavior. It also provides practices to ensure that children with social emotional delays receive intentional teaching. Programs that implement the Pyramid Model are eager to work together with families to meet every child's individualized learning and support needs. To learn more about the Pyramid Model, please visit ChallengingBehavior.org.

How to Teach Your Child to Appropriately Get Your Attention

Brooke Brogle, Alyson Jiron, & Jill Giacomini

It is difficult to have a conversation with someone if you do not have their attention—this is true for both children and adults. The ability to successfully capture someone's attention is a fundamental social skill and provides the foundation for future success in social settings and relationships.

Children use a variety of ways to get attention and will often resort to techniques they find most effective, such as yelling or whining. For example, think about a child who wants to get Mom's attention when she is on the phone. He knows that if he continues to yell loudly, Mom will eventually pause her phone conversation and ask what is needed. If yelling and whining gets a child what he needs, he will continue to yell and whine until he learns a new way to get attention.

How can you change this pattern? You can teach your child the way that you want him to get your attention (such as tapping you on the shoulder) and then reward him when that behavior occurs. When you take the time at home to build on the skills your child is learning at school, you reinforce these positive skills and create a solid social foundation for your child which will help to reduce challenging behaviors.

Try This at Home

- Model the behavior you are teaching and do it often! If you need your child's attention, tap her on the shoulder, move to her eye level and begin your communication from there!
- Practice, practice, practice! Play with this new skill. Practice with both parents, siblings and friends. Your child can teach her grandparent or teddy bear how to tap on someone's shoulder to get their attention.
- Remind your child of your expectation. If you are on the computer and she whines or begins to cry for attention, remind her, "It looks like you need something. I will respond if you tap on my shoulder and ask me."
- Celebrate when your child displays this new skill. "Wow, you tapped me on the shoulder because you wanted some milk. I am super happy to get you some. What a great way to get my attention!"

Practice at School

Most peer interactions are initiated when a child wants to give or get something from a friend. Rather than grab or yell across the room, your child is learning to gain a friend's attention before beginning a conversation by:

1. Moving to stand next to the person
2. Tapping the person on the shoulder
3. Looking at the person's eyes to see if they have their attention

The Bottom Line

Behavior is meaningful and communicates a message. If a child does not have an appropriate way to communicate, he will often use challenging behavior (e.g., hitting, screaming, whining) to communicate his needs. If his needs are then met, the behavior is reinforced and he will continue to use the challenging behavior to communicate. When parents teach their child how to appropriately get attention, the child will be less likely use the challenging behavior to communicate.

LEWISTON FAMILY HOUSING, LLC

Lewiston Family Housing, LLC is proud to announce the completion with sale pending of our first house in Lewiston, NE.

The town of Lewiston and surrounding communities have for some time been in need of quality, reasonably priced housing for families wishing to move into the Lewiston district. We are proud to have formed a company dedicated to offering houses to families wishing to move into the area. These are either very good used houses, refurbished to modern standards. Or new from the ground up builds. These houses are either with standard exterior/interior designs or we can customize a build to suit your tastes. We plan to build in the town of Lewiston, outside Lewiston on acreages and in other locations in the Lewiston district. We have received good interest to our concept and look forward to assisting interested families with their housing needs. We have further builds planned for this year and more planned for the future, so contact us soon. Also, if you know of a house in good condition needing to be moved, please let us know at the number below.

If you have any questions or wish to discuss how your dream home can be built, please call Larry Husa at (402) 696-4564.

Hope to talk with you soon!

READING ROADMAP

It Takes a Community

It takes collaborative partnerships between schools, educators, families, and communities to guarantee students are on the road to literacy success.

Graduation, college and career preparedness are more likely possibilities for students who master reading skills by fourth grade.

Sharing stories, rhymes, games, and daily talk in a family's home language supports language and literacy development, which in turn supports academic success.

Be a Partner

Develop and maintain a close working relationship with your child's teacher. Stay in touch between report card periods. Keep informed about your child's progress in reading. Ask the teacher about ways to help.

- Is my child reading on grade level?
- What does "reading on grade level" look like?
- How far below grade level is my child reading?
- What is an Individualized Reading Improvement Plan (IRIP)?
- What specific areas of reading is my child struggling with?
- What activities can I do with my child at home to help?
- What additional supports are being provided to my child at school? How frequently, and for how much time?
- How frequently will we meet to discuss my child's reading progress?

Nebraska's Approach to Literacy

The Nebraska Reading Improvement Act, enacted in 2018, creates a system to identify students experiencing challenges with reading, to engage families in the development of individualized reading improvement plans and to provide quality support. The heart of the Nebraska Reading Improvement Act is early identification of students who need extra reading support so that they receive targeted intervention. Early student success is a roadmap to everyone's future success.

Read with Your Child

Ask questions that will lead your child to understanding the story better. Have your child repeatedly read parts of the book to develop the skill of reading smoothly, evenly, with expression and without mistakes (fluency). Emphasize big ideas in the story, such as the main characters, where and when the story takes place, the sequence of events, etc. Build on what your child already knows about the topic. Pause periodically during the reading to model what good readers do by saying out loud what you are thinking about what you are reading. This glimpse inside the reader's mind will give your child a model to go by. At the end of the reading, summarize the entire story in a few sentences.

Hit the Road for Great Books

Your library is one of the most important resources in your community, and anyone can use it. Story times, special events, books, magazines, computer access, homework help and other exciting opportunities and activities await the entire family at your local library and book store.

Audio and E-books can be accessed through your public and school library. If your child has a computer or tablet, make reading one of the primary activities they do during screen time.

Kindergarten to 3rd Grade Reading Resource

The Read at Home Plan resource was created to assist you in understanding how to support your child's reading development and progress. Using materials found around your home, you will be able to practice the skills necessary to help your child become a fluent reader. You will also find links to videos that show families engaging their child in some of the activities that are listed. This resource also includes information on the Nebraska Reading Improvement Act, which was created to ensure all students are ready for success in school and beyond.
